Annotated bibliography requirements vary from assignment to assignment. Regardless of the assignment requirements, an annotated bibliography requires the research to include 2 of 3 additional pieces of information regarding the source: a summary, an evaluation, and/or a reflection.

Summary is an overview of what the source is providing the researcher.

Evaluation is the researcher’s assessment of the sources reliability.

Reflection tells us what the researcher learned from the source and its relevancy to the research.

The OWL provides additional information on the requirements and format of an annotated bibliography.
